The speaker will outline how Particle Physics at accelerators has played a crucial role in answering fundamental questions about the behavior of Nature. The seminar will identify what are today's fundamental unanswered questions and argue that accelerator-based research will continue to be an essential component to be able to address them.